It's May, So Let the Good Times Roll

ay is a special month for many of us mothers, and this year I want to celebrate my own mamma, who will be 84 years young. If you are a mother of older children, you probably have a lot of memories of this special day. Expectations are always high, though, which can make it a tough day for some. My own mother's health has taken a turn and she no longer knows her age. It's times like these that we need to hold on to the people we love and cherish all that we've shared.

For many years I hosted Mother's Day, but my daughters have now taken the baton, and thank goodness! There is so much going on this month. On Saturday, May 21, the Gilroy Downtown Business Association will host its annual Wine Stroll with 30 local wineries pouring in 30 businesses/locations. We live in one of the most amazing areas in the world for wine and I sure love my local vintners, which reminds me to remind you to buy your ticket now. I'll meet you there or at the Gilroy Center for the Arts at the corner of 7th Street and Monterey, where the music will be located. There will be lots of tunes this year along with plenty of arts & crafts vendors.

May also marks the official start of Festival Season, and I love our festivals! Our first one this month occurs May 21-22 in downtown Campbell at Boogie on the Avenue. I'm hoping my favorite purse vendor is there, Candace Christina, which is named after two daughters and created in Napa with vintage upholstery. The food is yummy and I do believe we tried alligator last year, but it's a fog—the wine was too good!

At the end of the month is the Morgan Hill Mushroom Mardi Gras Festival, which is always held during Memorial Day weekend. I grew up in Morgan Hill, so it is nice to see old friends and work alongside the amazing board that puts this event together every year. Stop by our Out & About and New SV Media tables.

Have fun out there and since the sun is shining, you know what that means: don't forget the sunscreen!

SUMMER MUSIC

Jewel will be at Mountain Winery on May 13.

Sounds of the Summer

rom the soulful sounds of Adele and Jewel to the funky beats of The Roots and classic tunes of Steely dan and Jackson Browne, the South Valley has no shortage of excellent concerts to attend this summer.

Mountain Winery

Fri, May 13, 7:30pm: Jewel

After living in her van, Jewel got signed after a performance at a coffee shop where she also barista'd. She released her first album, "Pieces of You," at the age of 21 and charted three songs with her pure compositions and conversational lyrics. The album sold more copies than her subsequent works combined, and her current tour, "Picking up the Pieces" promises to a return to that sound.

Sun, Jun 26, 7:30pm: The Roots

If rap is food, then The Roots are vegetables. Questlove tiptaps the boom-baps and the effortlessly eloquent Black Thought unspools rhymes that balance story-telling with metaphorical wisdom and societal critiques. The neo-soul duo got their start busking on the streets of Philadelphia and now have been Jimmy Fallon's house band for the last seven years.

Wed, Jun 29, 7:30pm: Kenny Rogers

This pop-country crossover superstar has sold over 120 million records worldwide. In his final world tour, the icon will play chart-topping tunes like "Lady," "Through the Years" and "Islands in the Steam." But his favorite and far-away most successful hit is "The Gambler," which got parodying in Geico ad and tells the story of a late-night poker game with a crusty fogev who has some widely applicable advice about holding and folding.

Fri, Jul 8, 7:30pm: Boston

After getting his masters from MIT, Tom Schultz formed a rock band. Schultz's production cultivated a distinctive sound that layered violin-esque guitar harmonies underneath Brad Delp's wide-ranging, scratchy vocals. Record label disputes mired their career after their humongous, self-titled debut album, but in their 40th year of performing they've become a staple on classic rock stations with mega-singles like "Foreplay/Long Time" and "More Than a Feeling."

Sun, Jul 10, 7:30pm: Diana

Ross

Every single working female artist today owes an immense debt to "the Queen of Motown." Her stupendous, soul-stuffed voice starred on twelve number one Billboard singles. She duetted with Lionel Richie for the wedding slow dance classic, "Endless Love," loaned a sample to Biggie Smalls on "Mo Money Mo Problems" and launched into immortality with "Ain't No Mountain High Enough."

Fri, Aug 26, 7:30pm: Peter Frampton

Frampton came to fame after his internationally-successful live album, "Frampton Comes Alive," that featured his iconic use of the talk box that modulates his electric guitar through his mouth. In his early career, he struggled with the title of "teen idol" due to his dreamy looks and shirtless Rolling Stones cover, but he's since earned his place in the most hallowed realms of rock.

City National Civic

Tue, Aug 16, 8pm: Jackson Browne

Jackson Browne originally broke out writing songs for other artists—a practice he would continue throughout his career, penning countless hits. On the songs he sang, like "Running on Empty," "Somebody's Baby" and "The Pretender" he radiated amid his sumptuous melodies with a persistent sympathy. Outside of music, >10

Steely Dan head to Shoreline June 16.

Shoreline Amphitheatre

Sun, Jun 31, 7pm: Weezer, Panic! At The Disco

The dweeby-looking, but hard-rocking Rivers Cuomo fronts Weezer, perhaps the quintessential alt-rock 90's band with their slacker morals, sweeping grooves and layered self-awareness. Their hits like "Buddy Holly," "Say it Ain't So" and "Islands in the Sun" balance infectious pop and respectable hard rock.

Thu, Jun 16, 7pm: Steely Dan and Steve Winwood

Before they won Grammys, Steely Dan were Leather Canary, a Bard College band with Chevy Chase playing the drums. Since, they've pioneered a perfectionist style of funky jazz that blends stunning musicianship with tongue-in-cheek lyrics. Their live shows are characterized by smashes like "Reelin in the Years" and mind-bending solo after mind-bending solo.

SAP Center

Sat/Sun, Jun 30/31, 7:30pm: Adele

For most artists, releasing your album only in CD form would be commercial suicide. But Adele isn't like any other artist working today. This year, she cemented her stardom with the universally beloved "Hello," which begins with the declaration "it's me." And you know you've made it when that's all you need to say to announce your return.

A Guide to Great Festivals

ow do you want to spend you summer? Dancing in the streets or dining on mushrooms until you burst? Maybe motorcycles are your thing? Whatever gets you and the family going, we've got you covered with this South Valley list of attractions.

San Jose Japantown's Nikkei Matsuri May 1

To celebrate America's Bicentennial, San Jose encouraged ethnic groups to celebrate their culture. And for 40 years, Japantown has kept the tradition alive with this festival. Focusing on contemporary Japanese-American stylings, over 60 vendors will showcase their garments, ceramics and other handcrafted goods. The food will be prepared onsite and the outdoor amusements will range +13 +11 from jazz to the traditional taiko, an intricate percussion routine.

Boogie on the Avenue— Downtown Campbell May 21-22

Typically attracting about 50,000 people, this jazz-centric outdoor festival allows area residents to luxuriate in the sunshine, listen to quality local tunes and dig into some quality eats provided by dozens of vendors—the most famous of these being the Cajun specialists who concoct the best gumbo this side of the Mississippi. There's a Kiddie Korner, over 200 arts/business booths and a wide array wine and beer. The two day event features two stages headlined by hard rockers NRichN and twangy country singers Whiskey Pass.

Morgan Hill Mushroom Mardi Gras May 28-29

In its 37th year of existence, this monumental tribute to mushrooms will stuff them, deep-fry them, marinate them and more. Once inspired, you can take home portabella, crimini and white mushrooms foraged from the forests of Santa Clara and Monterey counties. They've got other foods if fungus ain't your thing, and in between getting down on earthy grub visitors can view jugglers, jesters and Peter Pan who will be whipping up balloon animals. There'll be live music and students that will be awarded with scholarships—$800,000 worth has been given out since 1980.

San Jose's Subzero Festival June 3-4

San Jose sprung up into a major metropolis in the last 50 years. Without a storied history or a super-dense arts scene, creatives must exercise persistence, but this has resulted in an intense pride for the wack-a-doo fruits of labor that have formed the beginnings of the promising cultural future. Organized by Anno Domini's Cheri Lakey and Brian Eder, the festival expands upon the First Friday art walks, blowing out the festivities to celebrate the myriad subcultures within music, food and tech that represent the best of the local indie talent.

Hollister Independence Rally July 1-3

Beginning in 1947, this motorcycle extravaganza claims to have given rise to the iconic American Biker image and provided inspiration for the "The Wild One," a classic film with Brando as the lead. A pilgrimage to Hollister over July 4th weekend is a borderline religious experience for hardcore riders and weekend warriors alike. Along San Benito Street, gorgeous bikes sunbathe while vendors hawk anything even remotely related to hog-riding. The entertainment will be provided by cover bands playing hits by Journey, Santana and Lynyrd Skynyrd-plus an all-female ensemble jamming Led Zeppelin. +14

SubZERO has something for everyone.

⁺¹³ Gilroy Garlic Festival July 29-31

The famous festival celebrates the many ways that the planet's best aromatic can be deployed in the culinary arts. The central spectacle is Gourmet Alley, a "gigantic outdoor kitchen" where skilled chefs will be flipping up garlic-smothered shrimp and calamari in huge iron skillets that produce a flame-show to boot. Chefs will also press the minced bulb into fresh fries, crunchy bread and mushrooms to highlight its versatility. There'll be live entertainment, cooking demonstrations and free samples of their savory garlic ice cream.

Los Gatos Fiesta de Artes Aug 13-14

There'll be over 150 vendors of handcrafted goods, a kid's zone and music by The Cocktail Monkeys and The Houserockers. All proceeds go to the Kiwanis Club.

Brunch is an excellent way to kick off Mother's Day.

Gilroy Gardens Goes Big on Mom's Day The month of May is full of fun things to do in Gilroy!

other's Day is on May 8 this year, and there are plenty of ways to make Mom's Day extra-special. Gilroy Gardens Family Theme Park will kick off its official 2016 opening of Water Oasis. While the kids splash and play, moms (and dads!) can sit back under the palm trees and relax with tropical drinks. That afternoon, the park also hosts a special Mother's Day Champagne and Dessert Reception in the Events Plaza (separate tickets are required).

Other Mother's Day options include the South Valley Symphony concert at Mission San Juan Bautista, wine tasting along the Santa Clara Valley Wine Trail, a shopping spree at Gilroy Premium Outlets, or a nice lunch or dinner downtown at The Milias, Old City Hall or Garlic City Café. Come discover one of South County's hidden treasures on Saturday, May 14, when the Wings of History Museum at the San Martin Airport opens the hangar doors for its annual Open House. Enjoy free admission to the museum and displays, plus free airplane rides for kids ages 8-17, tethered hot air balloon rides, radio-controlled model aircraft demonstrations and lots of hands-on activities. You'll see airplanes of all kinds, plus antique cars, farm equipment, steam engines and more. This event is high-flying fun for all ages!

As if that weren't enough fun, we've also got the annual Downtown Gilroy Art & Wine Stroll coming up Saturday, May 21. This is a great opportunity to explore historic downtown Gilroy while you shop, sip and stroll. Thirty different downtown businesses will be serving as "pouring stations" for a wide selection of wines from local award-winning wineries. You'll also enjoy live entertainment, art exhibits, special dining and more. Pre-sale tickets are just $25 and available at the Gilroy Welcome Center. This is a can'tmiss event and a great chance to discover the wonderful shops and restaurants in downtown Gilroy!

We'll finish off the month with a memorable Memorial Day weekend. One of Gilroy's most treasured traditions is the annual Memorial Day Parade, taking place this year on Monday, May 30. As someone once observed, it seems that half the town participates in this parade while the other half is there to watch! The parade is a wonderful way to salute our veterans and soak up the small-town spirit that makes Gilroy such a special place.

You'll also find other ways to celebrate all weekend long. Enjoy the All-You-Can-Eat BBQ at Gilroy Gardens Family Theme Park and take advantage of great sales at Gilroy Premium Outlets. Follow the Wine Trail to Solis Winery, which hosts their annual "Syrah & Sausage" event on Monday, May 30. The long weekend is also a great time to explore the great outdoors and all the outstanding hiking and biking trails at Harvey Bear-Coyote Lake, Mt. Madonna, Henry Coe and other nearby parks.

To find out more about these and other events going on in Gilroy, go to VisitGilroy. com or visit the Gilroy Welcome Center (located in Gilroy Premium Outlets Building A, near Forever 21).

CROSSROADS LOS GATOS

You have to be a little crazy to take part in the steep Cat's Hill Criterium race.

Big Trucks, Races and Biz in the Town

os Gatos has it all going on this May, starting with the Los Gatos Ballet Foundation special event May 1, The White Party. Held from 1-3pm, the catered garden party includes a poolside fashion show, activities for the kids, raffle and silent auction, and best of all the proceeds will benefit the Los Gatos Ballet Foundation.

Less than a week later, the Los Gatos Library hosts the sixth "Big Truck Day" event from 10am to noon on Saturday, May 7, in the Civic Center Parking Lot. Come see vehicles of all shapes and sizes, from police cars to recycling trucks to fire engines.

For all those big trucks you see around the Town, climb aboard and get a closer look, meet the drivers, and learn about the services they offer through their work with the Los Gatos Parks and Public Works Department, the Los Gatos-Monte Sereno Police Department and the Santa Clara County Fire Department. This event is always exciting and gives children and grown-ups alike the opportunity to see these amazing vehicles up close.

On Saturday, May 14, the 43rd Cat's Hill Criterium race, sponsored by nonprofit Los Gatos Bicycle Racing Club and Mike's Bikes, will be held in the Almond Grove area of Los Gatos. The mile-long course starts at Tait and Nicholson Avenues near Mike's Bikes, rounds to Bean, Massol, then features a 23 percent grade up Nicholson Avenue, goes around Bachman Park, followed by a fast downhill (50 mph!) and right turn, back to the start/finish on Tait Avenue.

Races for various levels and ages start at 9:20am and finish after 6:00pm. Some racers climb up Nicholson as many as 30 times during their race. The Cat's Hill Classic was started in 1974 by 1960 US Olympic competitor and Los Gatos teacher Bob Tetzlaff, along with his wife Lorine, who dubbed Nicholson Avenue "Cat's Hill," a designation that remains till this day. For more information, go to www.catshill.org.

If none of these fit the bill, take advantage of great networking in a fun and relaxed environment at the Chamber's Monthly Business After Hours Mixer! Every month, Chamber members catch up, meet new member and potential clients, and get an inside glance at a local business. This month's event will take place 5:30pm to 7pm on Tuesday, May 24 on the Patio of Hult's Restaurant. Come for a fun door prize and raffle prizes!or a complete listing of events, visit www.losgatoschamber.com.

CROSSROADS CAMPBELL

Boogie on the Avenue expects to draw 40,000 people.

Campbell Ready to Boogie Down

he biggest party in Campbell every year is almost here! Boogie on the Avenue is Silicon Valley's first festival of 2016 and it offers a huge celebration of rock, country, jazz and bluegrass music set against the unique, revitalized downtown area of Campbell.

Held from 10am to 5pm on Saturday, May 21, and ending an hour earlier on Sunday, May 22, Boogie on the Avenue combines all things music with great food (especially cajun and Southern cuisine), arts and homemade crafts, and plenty of unique shopping experiences at the boutiques and restaurants that line the city streets. There is a reason 40,000 guests and visitors are expected to attend what was voted Best Local Festival this year by Metro Silicon Valley readers—people from all over the South Bay want to get in on the action.

In addition to the good tunes (see music schedule below) and 200-plus vendors, Boogie on the Avenue will also feature a farmer's market located near Blue Line Pizza. Campbell Whole Foods will offer locally grown produce, special recipes and small special menu items. There will also be a Kiddie Korner for children. Organizers ask that people leave pets at home—other than service animals—as they will not be allowed entry.

The Campbell Chamber of Commerce proudly produces Boogie on the Avenue and Oktoberfest, which draws more than 80,000 guests and visitors to Campbell each year. The chamber is home to over 500 members representing thousands of employees from +24 he Street Festival in Downtown Hollister celebrates 30 years on July 16, and organizers expect this year's event to give people even more to talk about. Thanks to the festival's committee, each year the the Street Festival has added something new, whether it's a classic car show and vendor booths or a kiddie entertainment area. There are also live entertainment stages to add to the fun.

Last year's event featured a collaboration with the Hollister Fire Department to serve up a Chili Cookoff, and by popular demand it returns this year.

From the humble beginnings of a giant sidewalk sale, held by numerous merchants (some of whom served up free watermelon), and growing into a full-fledged festival, the event has changed over the years, right along with the downtown community.

The car show, however, has been a part of this event for more than 25 years and now features 200-plus cars of different makes and models, all vying for one of the awards being offered. Last year's best in show car was a yellow 1932 Ford sedan, owned by Ron and Joanne Bert from Pacific Grove. This vehicle is unique in that it is all steel. The Berts have been attending the Street Festival for four years.

Jim and Diane Besieger's gray 1955 Chevrolet was the winner of the People's Choice award. And, as we have learned, each car has a story. The Basinger's truck was purchased in 2004 from the Fresno County Road Department and showed its 50 years of hard work in the field. It was in desperate need of a makeover, which the Basingers gladly gave it through last summer.

The Street Festival also offers an award to 26

Light therapy can work wonders for the layers of skin.

Health & Beauty

Let There Be Light!

JACQUELINE SMITH

Beautiful weather is upon us, and adding a boost to your skincare routine might be just what the doctor (or esthetician) ordered. We're all busy, but LumiFacial LED light therapy is a 30-minute treatment that can be done on its own or as a treatment add-on with your deep pore facial. Quick, effective and painless, it's an awesome treatment that can be done in the span of a lunch break.

LED (light emitting diode) therapy is a safe, non-invasive technology that stimulates the skin at a cellular level. Just as plants absorb sunlight into cellular building blocks, the skin uses therapeutic light to repair and regenerate collagen and elastin skin cells. Enhanced collagen production greatly reduces wrinkles and improves the overall texture of the epidermis, resulting in a more youthful, radiant appearance and texture. Therapeutic light also kills acne bacteria and reduces inflammation.

The LumiFacial consists of four pre-programmed treatments for acne, pigmentation and sun damage, anti-aging and rosacea or redness. Each program uses frequencies and wavelengths from four different visible light spectrums to reach the layer where the damaged skin cells lie and targets many different skin issues.

- Blue light is the shortest wave. It reaches into the skin to regulate and calm the oil glands, improving acne prone skin.
- Green light is a longer wave reaching down to normalize the glands that regulate the coloring of the skin. This effect can decrease dark pigmentation spots, creating an even tone on the surface. It also reduces redness due to chemical irritation.
- Yellow light extends down through the epidermis layer to reach the tiny blood vessels and lymph system. It is known for detoxifying the skin by stimulating blood circulation, thereby increasing the healing and health of the skin.
- Red light is the longest wave, triggering repair throughout all layers of the skin. It is known to have a positive effect on the production of collagen and elastin, greatly improving hydration, firmness, and elasticity of the skin.

Always have your esthetician perform a consultation prior to the treatment. After a thorough cleansing, or completion of your facial, your esthetician will then place the LED panels over the area being treated. The LED lights are quite bright, so your esthetician will place goggles over your eyes beforehand. It's very relaxing and you may even find yourself falling asleep.

After 30 minutes, your esthetician may use the red light smoothing paddles for an added collagen boost, or apply an appropriate treatment mask. There are few contraindications with the LumiFacial, so that makes it great for almost anyone. Don't do a LumiFacial treatment if you suffer from epilepsy or are using medication that can cause photo sensitivity.

You will notice a change after the first treatment, but most clients achieve expected results after coming in twice a week for six to 10 treatments. With each treatment, you will see results that become longer lasting and the skin will take on a smooth, refined texture, with an amazingly youthful glow.

Jacqueline Smith is a licensed esthetician with more than a decade of esthetician with more than a decade of experience working in skin care. She can be seen by appointment.

Iris reticulata are about three inches across and six inches tall when they bloom.

A Passion for Plants

This Isn't Your Grandma's Iris—or Is It?

hanks to our winter rainfall and April showers, May flowers abound. Prominent among them are the wonderful, hardy, multicolored bearded iris. I love seeing them return each year, but recently my heart has been captured by some sweet (and, of course, uncommon) dwarf iris.

The Iris cristata flower certainly looks like an iris, as do the leaves, but both flowers and leaves are smaller and more delicate than the more familiar bearded iris. These dwarf crested iris flowers are about two inches across and come in varying shades of blue-purple-lavender, and more rarely white. The flowers are usually only four to six inches tall with the leaves growing a bit longer, but sprawling, and with the tips nodding over so the flowers are not hidden. The unusual thing about Iris cristata is that it prefers a woodland situation. It likes rich, well-drained but moist soil, and filtered to quite a bit of shade, unlike most other irises which prefer full sun. They are native to the Eastern United States—that's why they like regular water—even in the summer. Dwarf crested iris, like many other irises, have special stems called rhizomes that creep along the ground, spreading and growing into large clumps that bloom generously in the early spring. You can divide them right after they bloom, or in the fall, and I have even divided them successfully in late winter.

Iris reticulata and I. histrioides are two dwarf iris that grow from bulbs, rather than rhizomes. The species name reticulata comes from the word reticulate and refers to the netted outer covering of the bulbs. The bulbous iris flowers are about three inches across and six inches tall when they bloom. There are many hybrids with colors that are predominantly shades of blue, often with white or yellow markings, but there are some with purple or white flowers, as well as yellow if you include I. danfordiae. This group of iris is excellent in pots and in rock gardens. The leaves look unusual, very straight and tall, with the two long edges curled so tight they look cylindrical. The bulbous irises are well suited to our Mediterranean climate; they originated in the Caucasus and Asia Minor. They need regular moisture from fall through spring, but during the summer they go completely dormant and water should be withheld. They do like a cold winter, and some varieties start blooming as early as the end of January.

The final and smallest dwarf iris I want to tell you about is one I've grown for several years, but only recently identified. Iris suaveolens has a bronzy-yellow blossom that is only about three or four inches tall. The leaves are short and stout, nicely framing the flowers. It has grown really well for me in pots, but I'm still learning when to divide it successfully. This is a great iris to use as a companion plant for bonsai. It's small and charming, and the flowers seem to just suddenly appear. I've heard rumors of one with bronzy-purple flowers but that is still on my wish list.

Whatever else you do this month, be sure to get out there and plant something!

Make a few safety plans for the pets before that trip to the lake.

Pet Life A Guide to Taking Your Dog to the Lake

DR. JEANNE HAGGERTY

Ithough still in severe drought conditions, it seems we may have enough water this season to enjoy the local reservoirs. And as the weather warms up, many people will be heading out to the lakes with their dogs. Here are a few tips to help keep your dog safe and healthy.

Vaccines

Make sure your dog is current on the "core" vaccines before going out. This includes rabies and a distemper-parvo combination. In addition, dogs that have wildlife exposure (e.g. wild plants, standing water, etc.) should consider vaccination for Leptospirosis. This is a disease spread by wildlife urine, frequently through creeks, streams and lakes, and it causes kidney disease and failure. In addition, it can be transmitted to humans from infected dogs. Talk to your veterinarian to see if your dog should have this vaccination series.

First Aid Kit

Always carry a basic first aid kit on your boat. Include basic wound treatment supplies, antiseptic soap and bandaging materials. It can be used for both the two and four legged passengers.

Water

Bring plenty of fresh water for your dog. They will be tempted to drink the lake water, which is often infected with parasites such as giardia.

Life Jacket

Dog life jackets are readily available online and will help take away some of the anxiety about drowning, especially in an overexcited dog whose demeanor can mask the fact that they're becoming physically exhausted.

Heat

Even though your dog may be spending a lot of time in the water, they can still overheat—especially on warm days. Make them spend some time out of the water and in the shade to rest. Dogs suffer from heat stroke just like people, but the symptoms are often overlooked until they have progressed to a dangerous state. Symptoms can include: decreased energy, heavy panting, elevated temperature and reddening of the white portion of the eyes.

Foot Protection

It is common for dogs to come across glass during lake trips. Sometimes we see severe tendon and ligament lacerations, but more commonly we see simple lacerations to the foot pads. Although you cannot prevent all of these injuries, neoprene boots that velcro in place can be helpful in protecting the feet from lacerations. Foot lacerations can require prolonged bandaging and often do not hold sutures well. Anything you can do to help prevent these foot lacerations will save you a headache.

Foxtails

If you plan to let your dog onto the shoreline off leash, be sure to thoroughly check them for foxtails afterwards. Foxtails are small plant heads that have barbed ends which burrow into tissue. We most commonly remove them from feet (between the toes), ears, eyes and nose. Alternatively, keep your dog on a leash while close to the shore to keep these pesky foxtails from finding a way into your dog.

Prepare your dog for the lake season and you'll be able to enjoy our wonderful local reservoirs.

FARMER IN THE FIELD

Cheese and cherries can be a delicious pair.

It's Cherry Season!

BONNIE SWANK

ay is cherry season in California, but many of you may remember that cherries were scarce throughout the state last year. The warm winter didn't provide the trees with the chill hours they needed, and the drought didn't provide them with enough water. On top of all that, unbeknownst to us, our orchard had become home to some very hungry and damaging worms. When the trees started to leaf out they looked like lace—the trees were sick and for the first time in the history of our orchard we had no fruit.

Cherries are a delicate crop and growing them is a gamble for farmers who choose to plant them. Not only do cherries need the cold winter months and rain, they also need the bees to do their job in the pollination department. Then we wait.

As optimistic as it may look when the cherries start to grow, only those that are actually pollinated will continue to mature, the others will shrivel up and drop to the ground. The only thing that could hurt the crop at this point would be hail, scaring the green fruit. Once the fruit starts to color, birds come in and they are not polite, flying through the orchard pecking at the best fruit and moving on. They couldn't just take one cherry and be happy. No, they have to ruin as much fruit as they can.

Many stone fruits suffer the same problems, but cherries have the thinnest skin of all, making them more susceptible to problems. Where other fruit can withstand a heavy rain right before harvest, it's disastrous for cherries because it causes the fruit to burst and crack.

So what does this year look like for California's cherry crop? Right now, positive.

The Murrys, our friends in Arvin, right near Bakersfield, started picking cherries in the middle of April. Due to the rains, they've lost about 25 percent of their first crop of Brooks' cherries. Bakersfield is much warmer than the central coast, so they're the first in the state to pick cherries. The Murrys, like us, grow several varieties of cherries, which stretches the seasons from front to back. As I write this article there is rain in the forecast, so they have their fingers crossed. Our cherries are still sorting themselves out so there is no reason to worry yet. Unlike our friends, Hollister is the last to pick cherries in California.

NOTE: For the best tasting cherries buy bright, firm fruit with green stems. Fruit that is old or has been stored in cold storage will be soft and tasteless.

Sweet Cherries with Robiola Cheese

The delicate texture of Robiola, a mild and creamy Italian cheese, is a great partner for sweet cherries. Ricotta or soft goat cheese would also work nicely.

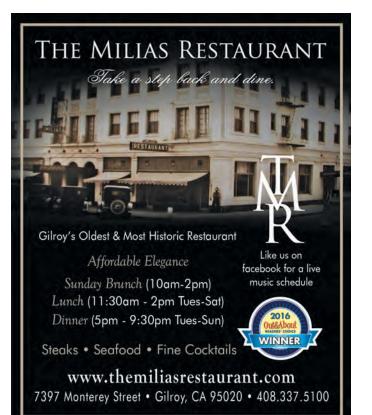

Prep: 5 mins Total time: 5 mins Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS

- Robiola cheese, room temperature
- 8 ounces fresh sweet cherries (1 ½ cups)
- · 3 tablespoons sliced almonds, toasted
- 1 teaspoon fresh thyme
- · Extra-virgin olive oil, for drizzling
- 1 baguette, ripped into pieces

DIRECTIONS

Place cheese on a serving platter. Top with cherries, almonds, and thyme. Drizzle with oil. Serve with baguette.

'Changing Boundaries,' now available online, documents the lives of many San Joseans.

Boundaries Broken

Documentary on 200-year history of San Jose now online

ne of the most ambitious historical projects ever completed in the South Bay is now just a click away. Earlier this spring, Norman Kline Productions, in partnership with CreaTV San Jose and History San Jose, announced that the documentary "Changing Boundaries: The History of San Jose" would be made available online. The goal is to let more people know the real story behind one of the most diverse cities in the country.

Directed and produced by Tricia Creason-Valencia, and written by Kline and Dennis Willis, the documentary covers 200 years of history in San Jose, one of the most important cities in California. The story spans from the establishment of the first Spanish town, to the first state capitol, to the center of the Valley of Heart's Delight and on to the modern era of being the urban Capital of Silicon Valley. Much of the film is told through the personal experiences of individuals.

"My goal in directing Changing Boundaries was to highlight the stories of the working people and political leaders who built this diverse city", said director Tricia Creason-Valencia. "I hope that use in the classroom and communitybased screenings will spark dialogue, not only about our shared history, but also about our future growth as a multicultural community."

The number of prominent figures who were interviewed for the documentary is staggering.

Elected officials who gave insights into the growth of an orchard town into the 10th biggest city in the country include Blanca Alvarado, a former San Jose councilwoman and county supervisor who fought for Chicano and Latino residents, as well as Tom McEnery, the former San Jose mayor who was never shy in telling a good story. Norm Mineta, the first Asian-American mayor of San Jose, who also went on to serve as U.S. Secretary of Transportation, talked about his own experiences growing up in San Jose, as well as the harrowing experience of his family being placed in a Japanese internment camp.

"It has always been our intent to make Changing Boundaries as widely available as possible, including for use in classrooms," said Kline, an executive producer on the project. "This movie would not have been possible without the funding of major sponsors from the community and the work of two great non-profits, CreaTV San Jose and History San Jose."

The movie can be viewed and downloaded for free on the CreaTV San Jose website, creatvsj.org.

CreaTV San Jose is the member-based, nonprofit community media center that manages the public and education TV and Internet channels for the city of San Jose. It provides free airtime and low-cost training and tools that allow diverse and underserved communities to tell their stories through video.

SPOKING MY MIND

It will be especially cool to bike to school on May 4.

Cycle through Bike Month!

CURT "CYCLE GUY" HENTSCHKE

elcome to Bike Month! There are so many things to do we shouldn't waste a minute. Everybody needs to get to school, so be sure to ride your bike on Bike to School Day this May 4.

Just a few days later on May 7, the I Care Classic will celebrating its 25th year of bringing beautifully bucolic springtime routes to all levels of cyclists. Choose from rides that range between 20 miles, 50K and 100K. Going to work May 12? Leave the car home for Bay Area Bike to Work Day! Stop by an energizer station along the way and pick up some warm encouragement and cool schwag.

On May 14, insane riders will tackle the Mike's Bikes Cat's Hill Classic. Different categories will be racing throughout the day, with a Kid's Fun Ride scheduled for 12:30pm. Or go to Aptos the next day and enjoy a 30-, 65- or 100-mile ride in the Strawberry Fields Forever. If that's too far, try San Jose's Kelley Park and immerse yourself in the Silicon Valley Bikes! Festival & Bicycle Show. There will be excellent music, craft beer, food trucks, stunt shows and cool stuff for kids. You can't go wrong.

This year's Amgen Tour of California will return May 15-22, and it's always fun to watch the pros attack Golden State roads.

If cycling to work was fun May 12, why not make it a week? National Bike to Work Week kicks off May 16. With all this fun, it might also be a good idea to honor fallen riders by joining a nearby Ride of Silence on May 18.

Bike Month has more in store, but on May 30 in Morgan Hill there will be the excellent Memorial Day Criterium. If you need more 411 on any of these events, check out our Save the Dates feature. Now go make May rock!

A few handy pointers can mean all the difference when trying a new style such as fly fishing.

The Lure of Fishing Some Pro Tips to Fly Fish

ast month I wrote about the simpler side of fly fishing and how anyone can take a basic fly rod, reel and a handful of flies and have some fun on our local waters. This month I want to give you some basic tips that will give you a strong chance at success. Fly fishing can be intimidating if you focus on the wrong things.

The point with this series of columns is to get you on the water and catching some fish. The bonus is that whether you catch fish or not, you will enjoy yourself and you will "get bit" by the fly fishing bug.

So, you have your fly rod, leaders and flies, and you have watched some of the videos I recommended. Now what? It is always good to have a book so that you have a resource to turn to. One of my alltime favorite fishing books is Curtis Creek Manifesto. This is the best beginner fly fishing book that I have ever read. It is illustrated and written like a comic book, which makes it a fun read. It has humor and the tips inside include all the most basic and important advice that you need. This book does not overcomplicate the reader in the lessons, and can be be found for less than $7.50 new. Talk about a value!

When reading a book like this, keep in mind that most of it is being written with the stream angler in mind. We don't have many streams in this region, but the lessons can be utilized for fishing warm water lakes. Of course, you can always take a day trip to the Sierra Nevada mountains and try your luck on a stream, as the season opened Saturday, April 30.

All the lakes in this area have spots where you can fly fish successfully, but where you fly fish on each lake is the key. Look for shallow coves and bays where there is a gentle slope and where there is cover for the fish to hide. Grass, bushes, submerged weeds and rocks all draw fish and provide cover. Approach with stealth: be quiet and walk slowly and softly. The fish are right against the bank this time of year.

Make your first casts close to shore, then place the next cast a couple feet further out. Continue this until you fan cast the spot from your left to your right. Move forward to where your first cast reached and start over. Work your way down the bank doing this and also casting beside structure in the water. Utilize the strip-pause technique. Cast your Wooly Bugger out. If fishing shallow, start retrieve immediately. Strip-strip, pause. Strip-Strip, pause. Use short, two-inch strips. Do not use the rod to impart the action. Point the rod at the fly and put the tip of the rod in the water. You do not want any slack line like if you held the rod in the 9 o'clock position. That slack will cause you to lose a fish. As you cast to deeper water, pause for eight to 15 seconds for the fly to sink, then start your retrieve. If you see your fly line twitch or pull away from you, set the hook! If you are using a floating fly like a popper, or a grasshopper, cast out and let the fly sit. If you have any slack in the line after the cast, tighten it up. Twitch the fly or popper and let sit for a few seconds and repeat.

These tips will help you to catch your first of many fly rod fish. Get that book, watch some YouTube videos and get out there on the lake! I'll be looking for you. If you see me, come say hi!

The Action Heats Up: Catching Lizards

s spring moves into summer and the days heat up in May, one group of wildlife becomes particularly reliable for photography: lizards. Lizards are reptiles that generally require exposure to sun and heat before they become active in late spring and through summer. Many species of these fast-moving, fourlegged critters are abundant in San Benito and Santa Clara counties. They are covered by scales, tend to eat insects and are usually active throughout the day, making them great photo subjects even during the hot midday hours.

Perhaps the most common lizards in the region are western fence lizards and side-blotched lizards. Fence lizards perch on territorial outcrops including rocks, logs and fence posts, and appear to perform push-ups to attract mates by revealing electric blue color on their bellies. Sideblotched lizards are another common species with smoother scales than fence lizards and colorful patterns on their sides spotted pink, tan, orange and blue.

Other lizard species in the region include alligator lizards and Gilbert's skinks—both stocky lizards that skulk in leaf litter in search of insect prey—and whiptail lizards. Whiptails prefer very hot temperatures, have very long tails and move extremely fast in sandy habitats in search of butterflies, moths and other insect prey.

Perhaps the most striking lizard in the region is the coastal horned lizard. Appearing rather like a tiny armored dinosaur, horned lizards have spikes on their heads and sides to make them less appetizing to predators, and very wide, flat bodies. If provoked, they can bleed out of their eyes as a way to tell predators to "stay away." They are masters of camouflage, blending in well to their sandy and rockysoiled surroundings. They predominantly eat ants, and—like other lizards —fulfill an important role of controlling and limiting insect populations.

Lizards can be a fun subject for photography. They can be very fast, but if you approach them slowly and patiently, you will often be rewarded with lizards posing as they soak in the sun's rays or exhibit some interesting behavior, including mating displays and capturing insect prey. Try to use macro and telephoto lenses to capture details of lizards from a distance. Be creative with compositions: try for headshots as well as full-body images; try to capture images at ground level; reduce depth of field to make the lizards really stand out. Also try to capture the glint of sunlight in the eyes of your lizard subjects to convey their vitality as living things.

Look for lizards anywhere, even in your backyard, and explore protected areas like Henry Coe State Park and Pinnacles National Park for further opportunities. Good luck, and enjoy fun in the sun photographing some of our local wildlife!
